

GAIN Capital to consolidate its retail FX/CFD business in Australia under the City Index brand

Sydney, Australia - April 5, 2016 - GAIN Capital Holdings, Inc. (NYSE: GCAP; "GAIN" or "the Company"), a global provider of online trading services, announced plans today to consolidate its retail FX/CFD business in Australia under the City Index brand.

The move follows GAIN Capital's acquisition of City Index in April 2015, which left GAIN operating two brands in the Australian market – City Index as well as its global retail FX brand, FOREX.com.

"City Index is one of the most well-known and trusted CFD brands in Australia," commented Samantha Roady, GAIN's President of Retail. "This move allows us to focus on further enhancing the City Index service to meet the needs of traders in Australia."

The FOREX.com brand will be phased out in Australia over the coming months, with existing FOREX.com customers transferred to the City Index service. FOREX.com customers will receive notification of the transfer process to City Index over the coming weeks. FOREX.com customers moving to the City Index service will benefit from an expanded product offering of over 5,000 markets, including FX and CFDs on indices, commodities, as well as a full range of global and Australian share CFDs.

All City Index customers' trade on fixed spreads in market hours, such as 1 pt on Australia 200 and other global index markets and FX spreads from 0.8 pips, with margin rates from just .5%. City Index's award winning Advantage platform is optimized for CFD traders, with features like automated trading, advanced charting and more.

Established in the UK in 1983, City Index is a global market leader in CFD trading, servicing retail traders in the United Kingdom, Europe, Middle East, Singapore and Australia. For more information, visit www.cityindex.com.au.
